THE POINT OF CHARGING

Why the public charging infrastructure needs to catch up with the rise of EVs

NITIN KUMAR New Delhi, 14 November

apil Singh - not his real name became a contractual driver with a state-run outfit in the National Capital Region of Delhi. He was excited to be taking the wheel at an electric vehicle (EV) made by one of the country's foremost carmakers. It came with a 15-ampere charger that took the battery from zero to full in seven hours. And the EV could travel 250 km or so on one full charge. Singh would not tire of praising his vehicle before his friends. His fervour dimmed a little when he faced an unexpected roadblock when his charger began to malfunction. He first thought he would charge his EV at a staterun charging station. However, he soon discovered that his EV came with a Combined Charging System Type 2 (CCS-II) charger. The government charging stations supported the Bharat Standard.

Desperate for a solution, Singh contacted his supervisor, who advised him to take the car to another office complex in New Delhi. He promptly landed up there only to find himself at the back of a long queue, the kind usually seen at CNG filling stations, only this one was a little longer.

Soon, Singh began to set aside a chunk of time in his daily routine after dropping his boss at his office, to get his EV's battery charged. "At times, I had to request my boss to call a taxi since the car's battery was depleted. I am fortunate that my boss did not reprimand me," he says.

Business Standard spoke to nearly a dozen persons who drive EV taxis. All of them tell stories similar to Singh's, of not finding the right charger on the go and having to find their way through the combinations of charging stations, charging points, and charger types.

India currently has a ratio of one charger for every 13 cars, a contrast to China's ratio of one charger for every four cars when it crossed the 100,000-units markin sales in 2015. Europe and the United States have a charger for every three and six vehicles, respectively, shows data from the International Energy Agency.

Another hurdle in the realm of public charging is the scarcity of fast charging options. According to an analysis by NRI Consulting and Solutions, a mere 20 per cent of six hours to charge a vehicle.

the public charging stations in India currently provide DC fast charging services.

According to the Bureau of Energy Efficiency's website, India has two types of AC(slow or moderate) chargers: Bharat AC-001 and Type-2 AC. There are three types of DC (fast chargers): Bharat DC-001, CHAdeMO, and CCS-II.

The 30kW DC public charger takes around 60 minutes to fully charge an EV with a 30 kWh battery. In contrast, the onboard charger, rated at 3.2kW, can take 10 hours for a full charge. Additionally, customers have the option of installing a 7.4 kW type-2 AC fast charger at home, which reduces the charging time to four hours for a full charge.

According to data from OMI Foundation's EV dashboard, India has 10,185 chargingstations comprising 17,094 charging points. Of these, 8,168 are fast-chargers, with power outputs ranging from 15 kW to 500 kW. The remaining chargers offer slow or moderate charging, requiring more than Amar Kumar, who, like Singh, would not reveal his real name, drives an EV for a ride aggregator. The fast BEVC-DC001 charger (Bharat standard) works well with his old EV, but if the battery charge goes below 20 per cent, he has to use his Type-2 AC charger. "We are told the cars get charged in around one hour, but I have seen it take three hours, as it first uses slow charger and then fast charging," says Kapil.

The lack of standardisation has kept EV owners and drivers in a state of worry. The high cost of fast charger installation and uncertainty about standards also make it difficult for operators of charging points.

"India annually sells only 50,000 EVs currently. The cost of installing fast chargers ranges from ₹30 lakh to ₹60 lakh, depending on their power output. The lack of standard isation limits investment options. We are now investing in CCS2, as several new cars adhere to this standard. However, if some other standard takes the lead in the future, the landscape could change," explains a charging station operator.

DC chargers are compatible with cars and buses. Two-wheelers and threewheelers use slow and moderate charging, which resulted in the proliferation of thousands of charging adapters. All these vehicles are charged by the 15-ampere charging socket, which is compatible with home and public slow and moderate charging of 7 kW to 11 kW.

The relatively sparse charging infrastructure in India could impede widespread adoption of electric cars and hinder India's progress towards its sustainability goals, say experts. A World Bank analysis found that investing in charging infrastructure is four to seven times more effective in EV adoption than providing upfront purchase subsidies.

Meanwhile, Kapil Singh, the ardent advocate of EVs not too long ago, is now a fervent seeker of a standardised charging infrastructure.

Driving the transition

As India pursues its sust- Power, and Kazam emerging as ainability goals, EVs have emerged as a central component. Their backbone is the network of diverse charging solutions. The consumer charging options predominantly include home charging and public charging. Meanwhile, inadequate infrastructure has led to the emergence of battery swapping and portable mobile charging services.

According to a McKinsey report, "Consumers are driving the transition to electric cars in India", released in September, Indian consumers show almost equal affinity for public and home charging (58 per cent and 42 per cent, respectively) despite appreciating the latter as being cheaper, more convenient, and more accessible. Upon purchasing an EV, consumers receive a charger that is compatible with their home infrastructure. The public charging infra, on the other hand, comes in handy when consumers require a charge while on the move or when they seek rapid charging. According to data from the Bureau of Energy Efficiency, the country currently has 10,186 operational public charging stations. Of these, 4,284 are administered by public sector undertakings (PSUs), including entities such as IndianOil e-Charge Station, Hindustan Petroleum Corporation, Convergence Energy Services Limited, and the Kerala State Electricity Board. The remaining fall under the purview of private sector operators, with Ujoy Technology, Tata charging and other services.

the leading players. The government is believed to be preparing a standardised charging protocol in response to concerns voiced by industry stakeholders. The proposal is to introduce either a single charging standard applicable to all types of EVs or, alternatively, two standards: One for two- and threewheelers and another for fourwheelers. The government has also released its plans to develop a battery swapping policy with the goal of minimising wait times and enhancing the overall customer experience.

The emergence of swappable vehicle models from Piaggio, Omega Seiki, and others in the pipeline is anticipated to expand the adoption of battery swapping, especially amonge3W vehicles. "In this domain, Battery Smart and Chargeup are noteworthy players, providing swapping services for e2W and e-rickshaws. Battery Smart, in particular, has a substantial presence with over 770 swap stations, primarily concentrated in the Delhi-National Capital Region. However, e2W swappable charging options remain limited, with only a few models, such as the Hero Vida, currently offering this feature," noted Preetesh Singh, a specialist in CASE and alternate powertrains at NRI Consulting and Solutions.

Several startups, including Hopcharge and Mobec, are also competing to establish themselves by offering door-to-door fast
